Quick Facts

- Licorice root is one of the most popular herbs in the world.
- The licorice plant is officially a weed, native to southern Europe, Asia and the Mediterranean. It is about 4 feet tall with purplish flowers.
- Licorice's botanical name comes from the Greek words meaning "sweet root."
- Glycyrrhizic acid is extracted from the root and used as a flavoring in food, tobacco, alcohol and cosmetics.
- Some varieties of licorice root are 50 times sweeter than sugar.
- Licorice root has numerous health benefits and is one of the ingredients in European cough preparations.
- Research has shown that licorice helps treat and relieve the pains that accompany certain types of ulcers, and it is good for the adrenal glands.
- Licorice is not for everyone. People who have high blood pressure, glaucoma, diabetes, kidney or liver disease, and those who take digitalis should limit their licorice intake.
- Modern licorice candy dates from 17th century Holland. Dutch sailors spread this wonderful delicacy to other European nations.
- April 12th is National Licorice Day.
